SUBJECT : Revised Implementation of Homeroom Guidance (HG) during Crisis Situation for S.Y. 2021-2022

DATE : August 25, 2021

The Office of Curriculum and Instruction (CI), through the Bureau of Curriculum Development (BCD), issues this document as basis for the Implementation of the Homeroom Guidance (HG) during Crisis Situation for SY 2021-2022. This document is a revision of the policy guidelines previously issued (DM-OUCI-2021-144 and DM-OUCI-2020-155).

The current pandemic has clearly affected the teaching and learning process that usually takes place in school. Certainly, our learners cannot avoid its impact in terms of their domains of development. While the Department has been responsive thru its Basic Education Learning Continuity Plan, it is crucial to cater to the life skills development of learners which will empower them to overcome the different challenges and adapt to the "new normal" brought about by the current crisis.

Though the plan was to have the complete implementation of the Homeroom Guidance in school year 2021-2022 accounting the needed preparations such as orientation, capacity-building, learning materials development and the like, the Department deemed it necessary to offer the new program to learners from Kindergarten to Senior High School with selected competencies that are lifted directly from Homeroom Guidance Curriculum. However, its full implementation which includes the complete curriculum, policy, and learning materials will be made available at the start of school year 2022-2023. All private schools are encouraged to implement the Homeroom Guidance.

Homeroom Guidance should be considered as an information component of mental health in the K to 12 Curriculum. It is a part of the Information Services that is primarily under the Guidance and Counseling Program. Due to the pandemic, with no other available mechanisms to deliver these services, Homeroom Guidance shall serve as a tool that would promote proactive, preventive, and educative methods to promote the learner's development of life skills.

Homeroom Guidance is a comprehensive, developmental, and proactive program designed to equip K to 12 learners with life skills on three domains:

- a. Academic Development,
- b. Personal and Social Development, and
- c. Career Development.

Homeroom Guidance shall complement the Department's goal, which is to produce holistically developed Filipinos who are able to understand themselves, have problem-solving skills, make informed decisions, achieve academic success, plan for their future, and respect individual differences. It envisions learners who can work for the common good of society and love for our country while upholding the rights and responsibilities of global citizens.

This issuance sets the basic standards for an efficient and effective implementation of the Homeroom Guidance in public and private schools nationwide. The Homeroom Guidance Observation Form and Program Monitoring and Evaluation Tool are also enclosed for reference.

Implementation of the Homeroom Guidance (HG)
during Crisis Situation for SY 2020-2021

I. Rationale

The introduction and implementation of the K to 12 Basic Education Program necessitated changes and revisions on existing DepEd programs to align them with the new curriculum. The K to 12 curriculum puts emphasis on capacitating learners with skills in doing their tasks and enriching these as they progress up to Grade 12. The curriculum takes into account societal factors and the learner's developmental needs. They need to perform different tasks, confront personal and social issues, and eventually decide for their curriculum exit. A responsive and proactive program in addition to the existing academic programs must address these needs.

In 1998, Revitalized Homeroom Guidance (RHG) for secondary learners was created to answer the learners' needs. However, certain considerations to make it more comprehensive, developmental, and proactive are deemed necessary.

Contemplating on the above-mentioned concerns, the Department of Education launches the Homeroom Guidance (HG). The program is relevant as it promotes rational thinking, healthy behavior, and positive disposition. Issues like academic failures, school dropouts, bullying, unhealthy sexual behavior, teenage pregnancy, drug addiction, online and social media addiction, and confusion in and/or poor career choice, and other challenges that beset our learners today were considered in developing the program.

These provisions were formulated based on relevant current literature, and in consultation with teachers, School Heads, and Guidance and Counseling experts. This will provide clear and functional understanding about the important processes in the implementation and the proper monitoring and evaluation of the program, which is an important component for its sustainability and continual improvement.

Based on the relevant literature and the practice in other countries, Homeroom Guidance is equivalent to Guidance Class, which is just a part of the Information Services of Guidance and Counseling Office (Villar, 2007; Mendoza, 2003). Aquino and Razon (1993) defined Homeroom Guidance as "an organized segment of the school's guidance services, which is given to a homeroom group usually a section or a class with a teacher-adviser as facilitator." Hence, the term Guidance Class Curriculum or Guidance Class is the most common nomenclature.

Homeroom Guidance is a responsive program that equips learners with competencies to address issues not included in the formal learning areas but is very essential to their development. Learners who go through Homeroom Guidance have been found to have significantly decreased inappropriate behaviors and demonstrated positive attitudes toward school as compared to those learners who were not part of the School Counseling Program (Baker and Gerler, 2001). The study of Brigman and Campbell (2003) also showed that elementary and middle school learners who were part of the school counseling curriculum and group interventions that emphasized cognitive, social and self-management skills have consistently exhibited good performance in Mathematics and Reading. Furthermore, the study of Schlossberg et.al (2001) supported the effectiveness of Homeroom Guidance. They showed that there is a significant improvement in terms of learners' behavior, attitude and knowledge in the areas of goal-setting, problem-solving, career exploration, and school resources. Further, the study of Carey and Dimmitt (2012) found that student's success in school, academically and behaviorally, can be attributed to the student's access to school counselor and comprehensive guidance programs and this is particularly true for students in high-poverty schools.

Based on the consultations conducted with the regional representatives and Guidance and Counseling experts, there is a great need for a program that advocates the development of skills along academic, personal and social, and career aspects. At present, Homeroom period is part of the class program, however, there is a need to update and improve its implementation. Some schools reported that Homeroom period is being used for classroom cleaning, extension of breaks, collection of reply slips, and the like. Clearly, the current practices do not aid the realization of the program objectives. More so, the consultation with different stakeholders, reiterated the significance of collaboration among home, school, and community to ensure the holistic development of learners. It has been raised that there should be a systematic and consistent monitoring and evaluation of the program to achieve its proper implementation.

To obtain the vision of the Homeroom Guidance, this document serves to guide the schools in:

- a. implementing the program properly to support the learners' development;
- b. providing systematic process in the overall conduct of Homeroom Guidance;
- c. organizing resources needed in the program such as budget, manpower, facilities, learning materials, and other logistical needs; and
- d. articulating the scope and limits of the program including its monitoring and evaluation.

MISSION

Homeroom Guidance is dedicated to address the academic, personal/social, and career development needs of the learners in a developmental, comprehensive, and proactive manner. This shall be realized through the collaborative efforts of family, school, community, government, and other institutions.

Homeroom Guidance Framework

The Homeroom Guidance (HG) is guided by the American School Counseling Association (ASCA) Model which is comprised of the three domains such as Academic Development, Personal and Social Development, and Career Development. The standards and competencies of HG are anchored on certain theories since each domain has its own peculiarities in consideration to the needs of Filipino learners and society.

The Academic Development is guided by Jerome Bruner's Scaffolding Theory that espouses that children will become independent learners as they mature if they are given the support and active help from their parents and teachers at the onset of their learning. The said theory states that the 'scaffold', reminiscent of a building scaffolding, of the growing child in their learning process is the knowledgeable person within their proximity, that is, their parents at home and teachers in school (rely to more knowledgeable people than them). Gradually, parental and teachers' support can be removed as the learners develop independence in thinking and knowledge and skills acquisition.

BCD-CSDD-O-2021-2585

Some concepts from the Learner-Centered Theory of Jean Jacques Rousseau were derived for the Academic Development domain. The theory stipulates that learner's cultural capital or life experiences should be tapped in designing the learning process. In this way, a participative classroom interaction will be in place. Learners are not viewed as tabula rasa and they are assumed to possess cultural kit or accumulated experiences which serve as a significant factor in the learning process. If learners' experiences are ignored, thinking will be limited and meaning-making of lessons will be hardly attained.

Cognitive Learning Theory of Jean Piaget has its share in this domain. It believes that cognitive development is a continuous process as the biological maturation and environmental influence take place. Learners gain knowledge and go through the differences between what they learned and what the existing realities are. Furthermore, it claims that learning and new knowledge can be stored if there are effective cognitive processes while learners encounter learning difficulties with ineffective cognitive processes. The theory tries to illustrate the processes and mechanisms of how reasoning skills and thinking using hypotheses develop by an infant as he/she becomes an adult later on. Piaget included the concept of schema which refers to "a cohesive, repeatable action sequence processing component actions that are tightly interconnected and governed by a core meaning." It is a set of linked mental representations of the world which people used to make meaning and act on different situations. During the development of mental processes, schema/schemata increase in number including its complexities.

Another concept in this theory that HG embraced is the adaptation process that includes assimilation, accommodation, and equilibration. Assimilation occurs when a person uses his/her schema to understand the new situation or things while accommodation happens when the previous knowledge is irrelevant and needs to be changed to understand the new situation or things. Moreover, equilibration directs the learner to attain equilibrium which happens when learner assimilates or accommodates new information.

The Personal and Social Development Domain in Homeroom Guidance got inspiration from the theory of Eric Ericson's Psychosocial Development. Its descriptive overview of social and emotional development was taken as one of the considerations in crafting the standards and competencies. His view on mastering the attitudes, ideas, and skills at each stage of development to help learners to be successful and contributing members of society is highly evident in the program.

The Career Development domain is influenced by the career development theories of John Krumboltz, Donald Super, and Eli Ginzberg. Krumboltz's theory of career development claims that genetic endowment that includes sex, race, developmental disabilities, and innate talents affect the career choice of a person. Furthermore, the environment, life events, and learning experiences also shape one's career decisions. People's changing roles and priorities create great impact to their career direction.

Department of Education
UNDERSECRETARY FOR CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION

BCD-CSDD-O-2021-2585

Super's Developmental theory of career choice is also a great influence in this domain. As a person's career advances, it undergoes five 'life-stages' that include growth, exploration, establishment, maintenance, and decline. His concept of establishing a 'self-concept' as a person grows plays an important role in identifying occupation. The concept of vocational maturity which may be attributed to person's age undergoes a cycle as manifested in his/her career transitions.

The concept of career development as a lifelong process including its early development of Ginzberg is clearly reflected in the Career Development domain of the program. HG advocates the early inclusion of career concept in the lives of learners and guide them as they discover the path that they want to take.

Homeroom Guidance's Domains

Homeroom Guidance is a developmental and proactive program that has standards and competencies that cut across all grade levels. The competency indicators are arranged from simple to complex and focuses on the development of higher order thinking such as analyzing and evaluating concepts, processes, procedures, and principles rather than just remembering.

- A. Academic Development Domain pertains to all academic related needs or concerns of learners. This serves as a guide to implement strategies and activities to support and maximize each learner's ability to learn which include but not limited to creative and critical thinking, communication skills and problem-solving skills.
- B. Personal and Social Development Domain pertains to concerns or issues affecting learners' individuality (self), relationship with others, and their interaction in community. It equips the learners with foundation for personal and social growth as they progress through school and into adulthood. This includes but not limited to intrapersonal and interpersonal skills, self-awareness, coping with emotions and stress, and resilience.
- C. Career Development Domain pertains to all occupational and world of work-related concerns and issues of learners. This involves the acquisition of skills, attitudes, and knowledge that enable them to make successful transition from school to the world of work, and from job to job across the life span. This includes but not limited to learners' discovery of their interests, talents and skills, decision-making, problem-solving, planning and in exploring their career options and opportunities.

Roles of School, Home, and Community and other Institutions

- 1. School ensures the proper implementation of Homeroom Guidance that leads to the development of the learners' life skills in the three domains. It convenes both home and community for the realization of Homeroom Guidance's vision.
- 2. Home plays vital role in the learners' life skills development through its consistent support, involvement, and collaboration with the school and community. It provides guided opportunities that complement the school activities of learners in Homeroom Guidance.

3. Community and other institutions reinforce the development of learners' life skills through its engagement in the school programs and activities. It also serves as a support system of the school as they craft policies, programs, and projects that are relevant to the vision, mission, and philosophy of Homeroom Guidance.

Homeroom Guidance Most Essential Learning Competencies

Homeroom Guidance Curriculum is essential to ensure access to quality guidance and counseling services for all types of learners. Hence, different learning modalities will be made available in the implementation of the Homeroom Guidance program.

Seventy-five percent (75%) of the HG MELCs are from the Personal-Social Development Domain. These competencies pertain to concerns or issues affecting learners' individuality (self), relationship with others and their interaction in community. It equips the learners with foundation for personal and social growth as they progress through school and into adulthood. This includes but not limited to intrapersonal and interpersonal skills, self-awareness, coping with emotions and stress, and resilience.

The remaining HG MELCs are composed of twenty percent (20%) Academic Development Domain and five percent (5 %) from the Career Development Domain.

Since this is not a formal learning area, Homeroom Guidance should not be part of the computation of grades by the end of each quarter. For S.Y. 2021-2022, it shall serve as enrichment activity that can be performed at home and in school or through other platforms with the help of guidance counselors /guidance designates, teachers, and parents.

In the process of choosing the MELCs the following criteria were also considered:

- a. applicability to real life situations;
- b. needs of the learners; and
- c. complements learning competencies developed in other academic subjects.

IV. Procedure

Implementation of the program shall be governed and guided by the following principles and policies:

1. Nomenclature - Homeroom Guidance shall be reflected in the class program of every school and other school documents such SF-9 (Form-138; Report Card) and SF-10 (Form-137; Permanent Student Record) as Homeroom Guidance. However, its

If the school does not have a Guidance Counselor, the School Head may assign a Guidance Designate but he/she should be provided with proper training specific to the implementation of Homeroom Guidance.

9. Medium of Instruction - The self-learning modules are written in English, but the regions may opt to translate the learning material in their mother tongue or any language convenient to the learners to ensure participation and interaction during the session and better understanding of the concepts.
10. Collaboration with the family and community is also encouraged in order to create a venue for the learners in developing such life skills. Parents may refer to the Gabay sa Magulang found in the SLM in order to guide their children in accomplishing the activities.

VI. Assessment of Learner's Development and Monitoring of the Program

Though the intent of HG is to help learners develop competencies that will aid them in facing different issues and tasks, it is important to still track their level of development. Homeroom Guidance implementers must always keep in mind that the program shall capacitate learners towards success, hence, compared to the formal learning areas that are being measured following the DO No. 8, s. 2015, Homeroom Guidance shall utilize Learner's Development Assessment Tool (Annex 3), guided by the verbal descriptions below:

Verbal Descriptions
No Chance to Observe	NO	The learner did not submit outputs or has not shown any of the target competency in a particular quarter.
Needs Improvement	NI	The learner accomplished and submitted 30% of the output in a particular quarter or has not acquired the target competencies.
Developing	D	The learner accomplished and submitted 60% of the output in a particular quarter or has acquired some of the target competency.
Sufficiently Developed	SD	The learner accomplished and submitted 90% of the output in a particular quarter or has acquired the target competency.

Learner's development shall be assessed through their portfolio and performance task.

Conduct of Homeroom Guidance is mandatory but this is not part of the academic rating. Grades are just descriptive. "Needs Improvement" description shall not be treated as failed but shall indicate the need for intervention from school and home. In the event that the learner remains at the "Needs Improvement" at the end of each quarter, the Adviser, Guidance Counselor, and Parents need to work together to provide intervention. Disciplinary cases of learners must not affect their HG grades.

Homeroom Guidance grades must be reflected in the SF-9 and SF-10 using the following descriptions:

No Chance to Observe	NO
Needs Improvement	NI
Developing	D
Sufficiently Developed	SD
Developed and Commendable	DC

The details of the Learner's Development Assessment results shall be attached to the said forms. There is no need to put equivalent ratings or computations for each description.

VII. Monitoring and Evaluation

Success and sustainability of the program will only be ensured if there is a systematic and adequate monitoring and evaluation.
